
The upcoming edition of Maison&Objet Paris will take place from the 9th to the 13th of September 2021 in Paris.

With the persistence of the Covid-19 pandemic that continues to prevent us from planning events smoothly, and with the results of the latest surveys carried out among exhibitors and visitors, Maison&Objet has decided not to hold the first session of the fair in 2021, initially scheduled for the end of March.

The next session of Maison&Objet Paris will therefore take place from the 9th to the 13th of September 2021, in conjunction with Paris Design Week.

This year, international buyers, specifiers, and members of the press will be able to attend both Milan and Paris and fully take advantage of these two major events in the fields of design, décor and lifestyle.

In September 2021, Maison&Objet Paris will enhance its programming with a focus on the Work! and Projects sectors. Work! is highly anticipated, with innovations for workspaces and the office, a field that has experienced major shifts in terms of design over the past few months. At a time when living spaces are continually redefining themselves, specifiers and interior designers will also discover Projects, an exclusive offer of materials and creative technical solutions for optimising hospitality, commercial, and residential spaces.

The teams at Maison&Objet are working hard to offer a new experience, using digital tools that allow attendees to optimally prepare for their visit to the show, and keep it going over time, based on what they’ve learned from the digital events recently organised on MOM (Maison&Objet and More).

The 8 thematic Digital Days will be held every week from 27th January through 19th March 2021, every Wednesday through Friday.
